1. On 13 September 1946, a member of the Thuringian Machine Tools Supply Association was summoned to a meeting at the Central German Administration of Industry in Berlin. He was told that all iron and steel supplies from the British Zone had been stopped as of 20 September 1946, that the Soviet HQ at Karlshorst was "furious" about this development, and that, as a result, the Communist personnel of the Administration was feeling rather nervous.

2. It was also stated that the stoppage of supplies would eventually cause shortages in the Russian Zone, necessitating an alteration in the industrial production program for the fourth quarter of 1946.
